
Long Term Care Protection

Posted on: June 13, 2016

Many mistakenly believe that if they need Long Term Care, either in their home or in a facility, the cost will be covered by provincial health care or other government agencies. While certain programs are available, a large portion of these costs become the responsibility of the patient or their family.

Ted and Martha had been retired for about ten years when Martha became cognitively impaired. Ted was able to look after her for a little over a year, but then Martha had to be moved to an extended care facility. The monthly cost of $2,500 meant Ted had to draw about $45,000 more per year, before taxes, from his RRIF. Less than five years later, Ted's RRIF ran dry.

John and Ellen retired in their early sixties. After just a few months of traveling and visiting with their grandchildren, Ellen's parents were no longer able to look after themselves and asked them for help. John and Ellen extensively renovated their home to accommodate them.

Shortly after the move, Ellen became a full-time care provider for her father who was injured in a bad fall. John went back to work to help cover some of the additional costs.

Kathleen learned first-hand of Long Term Care costs as her mother and an uncle had lived in nursing homes. Her mother's savings were quickly wiped out and Kathleen's uncle had to sell his home.

The last thing Kathleen wants is to deplete her savings, lose her home or become a burden on family and friends. She doesn't want the lives of her loved ones disrupted along with hers if she can't look after herself. But where will the money come from if Kathleen needs Long Term Care?

The answer can be found in Long Term Care Insurance. Generally available for purchase between the ages of 30 and 80, it pays a daily or monthly benefit directly to the insured when health or personal care services are required by order of a physician.

Typically, a policy will pay a benefit if the insured loses the ability to care for himself or herself due to cognitive impairment or the inability to do two or more activities of daily living (bathing, eating, dressing, toileting, transferring, and maintaining continence).

Long Term Care Insurance can protect your retirement, your independence, your quality of life, your freedom of choice and your dignity.

Long Term Care Insurance - because it's the right thing to do. Call today! [1]

Copyright © 2016 Life Letter. All rights reserved. For information purposes only and not intended to provide specific advice. Readers are advised to seek professional advice before making any financial decision based on any of the ideas presented in this article. This copyright information presented online is not to be copied, or clipped or republished for any reason. The publisher does not guarantee the accuracy and will not be held liable in any way for any error, or omission, or any financial decision.

Tags: long term care [2]

Mutual funds are offered through Investia Financial Services Inc. The particulars contained herein were obtained from sources which we believe reliable but are not guaranteed by us and may be incomplete. The opinions expressed have not been approved by and are not those of Investia Financial Services Inc. This website is not deemed to be used as a solicitation in a jurisdiction where this Investia representative is not registered.

Source URL: <https://lfpg.ca/e-newsletter/2016/2016-06/article-3.htm>

Links

[1] <https://lfpg.ca/contact-us> [2] <https://lfpg.ca/taxonomy/term/50>